In this episode of Luxury Roundtable's The Luxury Stance Podcast, we discuss how LVMH, Kering, Richemont, Puig, Swatch Group, Tapestry and Chalhoub Group are looking to grow their companies through acquisitions or brand mergers.

Also under discussion will be the growth strategy of major independents such as Hermès, Giorgio Armani, Brunello Cucinelli and Prada.

A major possibility is the shake-up in the luxury retail world, especially with department store chains in the United States as they navigate rapidly changing consumer shopping behavior and increased monobrand-store presence by luxury brands.

The goal of such M&A activity among luxury brands and retailers is obviously to scale and expand their capabilities. But this year, it may also be a lifeline for some.

In the latest episode of The Luxury Stance Podcast, Luxury Roundtable CEO Mickey ALAM KHAN and Silvertone Consulting founder/president Scott Kerr discuss the possible luxury goods and services M&A transactions that could happen this year and the new capabilities that mean the most to luxury dealmakers.
